The students pictured below were awarded Sigma Beta Delta...
The collegiate honor society is the preeminent means for higher education to encourage, recognize, and reward scholastic excellence. Sigma Beta Delta brings to its members the highest international academic recognition which your university or college can bestow. With this honor comes a significant responsibility to use your intellectual ability and the knowledge you have gained for the good of family, community, and society at large. It is not enough to celebrate past success, but as our ritual suggests, we must continually aspire to higher levels of achievement. In short, honor society members are recognized for the good of family, community, and society at large. We look forward to November 2007 in Philadelphia. Details will be available on the SBD website.
